During the tumultuous 1960s, 70s, and 80s, the prolific artist Ralph Arnold made photocollages that appropriated and commented upon mass media portrayals of gender, sexuality, race and politics. Arnold's complex visual arrangements of photography, painting and text were built upon his own multilayered identity as a black, gay veteran and nationally-recognized artist, hence the title for the exhibition, which is drawn from one of the artist's more personal pieces. Arnold drew upon influences as diverse as pop art, the Chicago Imagists, the Black Arts Movement, political photomontage, color field abstraction, and popular music, yet deployed them through the intersectionality of his own multi-faceted identity. Arnold's collage aesthetic functions as a metaphor of both his appropriation from diverse art movements and his prescient recognition of the interdependence, reciprocity and overlap between the social categories of race, gender, and sexuality in both his own life and American society.

The Many Hats of Ralph Arnold offers a rich analysis of Arnold's work and his relationship to the art and social movements of the 1960s-80s. This exhibition brings together Arnold's most significant contributions to the art of collage, including a recently rediscovered triptych made for the 1968 MCA Chicago exhibition Violence! in Recent American Art. The curator for The Many Hats of Ralph Arnold is Greg Foster-Rice, an associate professor of the history, theory and criticism of photography at Columbia College Chicago.

Echoes: Reframing Collage

A companion exhibition entitled Echoes: Reframing Collage includes works by contemporary photographic collage artists who, like Arnold, focus on themes of pluralism and identity, the role of media in society, and issues relating to gender and racial identity. Other areas of conceptual overlap with Arnold include techniques of pastiche and collage, appropriation, and multi-media references to music and mass media. Participating artists include Krista Franklin, Wardell Milan, Ayanah Moor, Paul Mpagi Sepuya, Xaviera Simmons and Nathaniel Mary Quinn. Echoes: Reframing Collage is organized by Karen Irvine, Chief Curator and Deputy Director at the Museum of Contemporary Photography.

These exhibitions will be accompanied by a catalogue with essays by scholars from a variety of disciplines who address Arnold’s historical significance. Contributors include musicologist Aaron Cohen, art historian Jacqueline Francis, art historian Rebecca Zorach, historian Timothy Stewart-Winter, MoCP Curatorial Fellow for Diversity in the Arts Sheridan Tucker Anderson, and curators Karen Irvine and Greg Foster-Rice.

Funding for The Many Hats of Ralph Arnold and Echoes is provided by the Andy Warhol Foundation for the Arts, the Terra Foundation for American Art, the Chicago Community Trust, the Driehaus Foundation, and Columbia College Chicago.
